Liberace

as we see it

When Kraft Television Theater repeated the play, "Patterns," four weeks after its initial performance, critics praised not only the play but the idea of repeating a good one.

Certainly repetition is nothing new to television. Many half-hour film series are rerun during the summer; others are rerun under different names so that, by now, they've made the rounds several times. But live hour-long plays are seen only once.

It is a physical impossibility to see Robert Montgomery's plays and Studio One. It is almost a physical impossibility to see all of the other hour-long plays presented on television. TV GUIDE publishes story lines and casts to help viewers make a selection, but we do not attempt to evaluate the plays for readers because no one can tell from a script or a rehearsal whether a play will be a success or a flop.

Kraft's producers were as surprised as anyone else when they received thousands of letters praising "Patterns" after its first performance. The letters, plus critical acclaim, prompted the repeat performance.

All of the hour-long dramatic series on the air have had at least a few extraordinarily good plays that would warrant repetition for viewers who failed to see the first performances. Somehow, though, sponsors insist on a new play each week in order to reach what they believe will be a maximum audience. As a result, once you miss a good play on TV, there's very little opportunity to see it.

We hope Kraft has set a precedent that will find more sponsors repeating outstanding plays. With proper exploitation, the audience for the second performance could be larger than that for the first one.

NEW YORK Bob Stahl reports:

CBS, seeking a strong show to pit against NBC's GEORGE GOBEL and Your Hit Parade, has tentatively accepted JACKIE GLEASON's offer to produce a weekly extravaganza of show girls, dancing chorus and variety acts, called Mardi Gras. If the Apr. 13 kinescope audition--probably the most expensive CBS ever attempted--looks good, the network will seek sponsors for a fall launching. Could be that JACKIE will have three CBS Saturday night shows--starring in The Honeymooners and producing the DORSEY BROTHERS' Stage Show and the new Mardi Gras.

News that Mrs. Peepers--PAT BENOIT--is to have a baby in her role on the show is to be revealed in this week's Mr. Peepers script. PAT's own baby, though, isn't due until midsummer . . . ABC's Stork Club has been canceled, effective after this Saturday night's telecast.

CLAUDETTE COLBERT will star in "Private Worlds," on Climax! Thursday, Apr. 7 . . . Climax! also planning a production soon of RING LARDNER's "Champion," which brought KIRK DOUGLAS fame in film version. ROD SERLING, who wrote the much-touted "Patterns," will do the TV script. No date set as yet.

Universal-International wants to produce a feature movie based on "12:32 A.M.," original play written by REGINALD ROSE for Studio One, if young VAN DYKE PARKS, who played in the TV version, is available.

With ratings on Norby far below expectations, the sponsor has halted further filming pending a decision on whether to cancel, switch to live production or revamp the film set-up. Producer FRED COE has been hired as consultant to help boost the quality.

Best of Broadway signs off after its May production, with the Wednesday night CBS period reverting to Blue Ribbon Bouts. Whether the once-a-month "specials" will resume next fall has not been decided.

ABC planning to telecast Best of Disneyland, culled from this season's shows, as a summer replacement for Disneyland from July 6 through Sept. 7 . . . ABC also cutting a kinescope audition this month of My True Story, a veteran radio show. It's to go either as a daytime soap opera or as once-weekly evening program.

Song pluggers are relying more on TV to introduce new tunes. JOHNNY DESMOND, starring on TV Playhouse this week, will introduce a new song. His recording of the tune will hit the record shops the following day . . Studio One introduced "Let Me Go, Lover," JACKIE GLEASON premiered "My Love Song To You," and PEGGY KING recently launched "Any Questions" on Dragnet.

A Lesson In Living:

How Liberace

By Dan Jenkins

On Nov. 19, 1954, Liberace went to a doctor. Nobody told him to go. He just went.

"If I hadn't," he says today, "it's quite possible that I wouldn't be sitting here now. I'm convinced that a coronary thrombosis would have knocked me out."

The 34-year-old pianist, something of an Eighth Wonder of the Show Business World, sat in his ornate but tasteful Sherman Oaks, Cal., home and Flat tummy: Liberace proudly showing his shrinking waistline, the result of a diet on which he has dropped 20 pounds, despite mother's tempting pies (below).

Faced His Greatest Challenge

talked frankly about his recent illness. He looked fit, slimmed down, clear-eyed. His color was excellent, his spirits bubbling.

"I'd been getting tired," he said. "Didn't seem to have the old energy. By midafternoon I could hardly stay awake. On that last concert tour, my eating and sleeping habits were all turned upside down. I went three and four days at a crack with practically no sleep. When I got back and was able to sit down and think for a few minutes, I suddenly realized that I was fat and tired. So I just got up and went to a doctor.

"They took a cardiograph and it was abnormal. I was lucky. I hadn't shown any symptoms of coronary thrombosis, but the cardiograph showed definite signs of heart abnormality. If I had tried to brush off that tired feeling and gone about my business, I'm convinced I wouldn't be doing any business at all today."

From Nov. 19 until Feb. 1, Liberace was under strict doctor's orders. He spent the first four weeks in bed. He was put on a diet, told to shed 30 pounds. And to stop smoking.

"That was the really tough part," he grins. "I was never a heavy smoker—maybe a pack a day—but I really enjoyed my cigarets. I cut them out completely for a while. Now I'm back to 10 a day, at the most."

A trencherman of the first order, Liberace was placed on a high protein diet. Steaks, fatless lamb chops, poultry, eggs, fish, continued

Time to reflect: Liberace dictates to sister, Angie, a book he hopes will help others.

A day's work: because Lee insisted on paying staff while ill, Gordon Robinson, his music arranger, demanded right to help build fence at Liberace home.

vegetables and an occasional—very occasional—wedge of pie, adding up to no more than 2500 calories a day, has been his regime.

"I've become a real calorie counter," he admits, "but, actually, it hasn't been so bad. A really rigid diet would have been a strain on my heart. I have a massage every day —keeps my face from becoming haggard and serves as exercise. I'm down 20 pounds already, from 211 to 190. I might even make 180, but I think the doctor threw that 180 at me just to get me to 190. And my waist has shrunk from 38 to 34."

Liberace's mother, a cook of noble proportions, clucks over him constantly. "These past months have seemed like years to me," she says. "But I think maybe the doctors were trying to scare him. He hasn't really been as sick as the papers have made out. He was just saved from being very, very sick."

The pianist was allowed out of bed for the first time at Christmas. Christmas is a production with him, an event he plans for on a year-round basis. While in bed he made gifts for friends—cufflinks, studs, jewelry—an activity which served the double purpose of keeping his fingers nimble. "No music," he complains. "For two solid months. Not one single note."

He also had a chance, for the first time, to catch up with his fan mail. During his illness he averaged 10,000 letters a week ("I opened 3000 in one day," his mother marvels.) and literally truckloads of gifts, ranging from handkerchiefs to a $2500 statue of Mercury and including all sorts of wearing apparel—socks, lounging pajamas, sweaters, shirts and ties.

His mother, too, has received hundreds of gifts—towels, bedspreads, tablecloths, dolls, quilts, lamps, toy poodles and many religious objects.

All the gifts are kept. "We let them go," Liberace explains, "only when they might do some good." A shirt recently went for $800 at such a charity event, and a hand-painted head of Christ brought $1000 at another.

Occupied with just about everything but his music, Liberace also has been "studying the problems of humanity as reflected in the letters I receive." He found Claude Bristol's "The Magic of Believing" so helpful to him that he has written a special prologue for a new edition of it.

"I am also working on a book of my own," he admits. "It has no title yet but it is more or less the association of events in my own life, told in such a way as to help other people work out their own problems."

He has completed nearly a third of the book, dictating it to his sister, Angelina.

Being out of action has cost Liberace about $170,000, including $120,000 in concert appearances, $25,000 for a Comedy Hour, around $10,000 for a Toast of the Town stint. But, he says, "You cannot put a price tag on your health." He kept his entire staff on salary—another $15,000—which proved a boon, in a way.

"I'm putting in a projection room off the patio and a new fence with 16 bars of music on it," Liberace explains. "And Gordon Robinson, my music arranger, insists on doing most of the work as long as he's on salary. He's wonderful with tools—and he has a terrible conscience."

Now back at work, Liberace is keeping his schedule to a minimum. "When I have to add something to it," he says, "I also drop something. I have a three-week date in Las Vegas next month, so I'm cutting out my spring tour." He is currently filming his TV show in two or three shooting days instead of one and doing only one a week instead of two. Repeats of both his TV and radio shows had to be run in during his layoff.

What has he learned from his experience? "Everything you do," he says fervently, "whether it's work or play or eating or drinking—whatever it is, do it in moderation. I goofed. I didn't work in moderation, and I was really packing away those meals. Those tours were brutal—three-and-a-half hour concerts followed by two hours of signing autographs, living out of a suitcase, racing for planes and trains. The schedule I was carrying was just too much for one human being to endure and it all caught up with me. I was lucky. I was real lucky."

Had he given any thought to retiring? "Retirement?" he laughs. "Never. The inactivity would kill me even faster than the coronary."

EYES WEARY?

TWO DROPS—QUICK RELIEF

Do you sometimes work your eyes too long at a time—till they feel utterly weary? Then, a pause for a quick two-drop bath of Murine for each eye refreshes them in seconds. Compounded of seven tested ingredients, Murine is gentle as a tear. It makes your eyes feel good!

High adventure: Mary Martin, as Peter Pan, falling captive to the dreadful Captain Hook (Cyril Ritchard) and his pirates in a memorable scene; while (below), dancing, she goes on warpath.

Peter Pan Hits The Road...

Milkshake for Miss Martin between acts of arduous play.

...For Two Hours

The TV production of Mary Martin's "Peter Pan" on NBC's Producers' Showcase Monday marks what may be the start of a new show-business era. For the first time, a hit play is foregoing the customary road tour after its Broadway run in favor of a one-time TV production. The single television presentation may play to as many as 40,000,000 viewers—far, far more than could see "Peter Pan" in theaters around the country over a span of years. If it succeeds, other hit plays may follow the lead.

No changes will be made for the TV production, which is to run two hours. "Peter Pan" on TV will cost a reported $400,000, including the time, talent and production charges. It may be that the single TV performance will earn as much for the "Pan" company as a lengthy road tour.

TV's "Peter Pan" will originate from the NBC color studio in Brooklyn, which is large enough to permit Miss Martin's "flying" scenes. The network also has an option to stage a repeat performance at a later date.

◀ Most famed, perhaps, of Pan's exploits is the aerial attack on the pirates.

Originally Buzz Aston and Bill Hinds and Joe Negri's Trio were to have done their new radio show on KDKA at 7 o'clock in the evening from the KDKA-TV studios. But the pipeline hasn't been installed yet and the boys practically break their necks each evening getting from The Gateway to the Grant Building in the short time between the end of their TV program and the beginning of their radio session . . . Actually they don't look alike, but people are always mistaking Florence Sando for Stephanie Diamond and vice versa . . . Bob Saudek, director of the TV-Radio Workshop for the Ford Foundation, told friends when he came here to address the Radio and Television Club that it's been 17 years—in 1938—since he left the KDKA continuity department to join NBC in New York.

Buzz Aston

The former Carole Mansfield, who did Sho-Biz-Quiz and Coffee with Carole on WDTV a couple of years ago, has been going to an undertaking school in Los Angeles to study embalming . . . KDKA-TV general manager Harold C. Lund's nephew, Bud Stevenson, who lives with him, is one of Mt. Lebanon's top volunteer firemen . . . Although it's still almost two months away, Ray Scott is already getting the decks cleared so he can take in the Variety convention in Hollywood the first week in May.

Marlene Gornall and her husband, John Whited, are now working for the same company—Guild Films. That's the outfit which is producing It's Fun To Reduce and also the one that just took over Matty Fox's Motion Pictures for Television. Whited has been selling for MPT for some time now . . . Note to sponsors of TV shows: The heaviest mail on a single subject ever received in TV GUIDE'S office concerned the controversy over a hillbilly hit parade show, starting off with the pro and con just about even but winding up with an overwhelming number of letters in favor of having that type of program.

All's Well

It's a good day! Our own Dr. Kelly is back on Guiding Light. I was just about finished with the story and the product. If I enjoy a program, I buy the sponsor's product. Without the real Dr. Kelly, I can't enjoy Guiding Light.—Mrs. Hans Groah, Steubenville, O.

Attention, Sponsors

Why can't sponsors be content with a commercial at the beginning and at the end of a program? Everyone we know heads for the kitchen to get a snack during the other commercials . . . So far at any rate, about all I can say for the Eddie Cantor Comedy Theater is this: Where does he manage to find those beautiful girls? Maybe it's the filming, but Banjo Eyes just doesn't seem to be the entertainer he was live . . . Tuned in Dragnet the other night for the first time in weeks and it's surprising how well both that show and Jack Webb wear. The low-pressure atmosphere is so right for these cops-and-robbers things . . . Never thought anybody else on Your Hit Parade would ever replace Dorothy Collins in my affections, but Gisele MacKenzie has. And how!

Gisele MacKenzie

Want to know something? Sid Caesar is coming around, slowly but surely. Can't say the same of Imogene Coca, however . . . Some of my friends tell me Dear Phoebe isn't consistent but every one I've caught —offhand, I'd say five or six—has been altogether to my liking . . . Surprising how the Ford Theater manages to keep its literary output always above average. "Tomorrow We'll Love," with Larry Parks, Nicole Maurey and Eduard Franz, was another example.

Strange coincidence the other Saturday when Peggy King sang "Any Questions?" on KDKA-TV's Dragnet, and then appeared with George Gobel, whose show follows immediately afterward on the same station, and sang the same song. It wasn't planned that way, it just worked out that way because Dragnet, a network show Thursday night, is a kinescope on the Pittsburgh channel two days later, just before The George Gobel Show comes on.

I never thought getting up early in the morning could be such a pleasure, what with Dave Garroway and Jack Paar to choose from. No matter which of these young men you tune in on, you can't go wrong. As for me, I keep switching my dial from one to the other (when I'm up at the crack of dawn, that is, which isn't very often) and you'd be surprised how pleasantly they start my day off. I'm glad I don't have to say which of them I like better; if my life depended on it, I'm afraid I'd have to split my vote right down the middle.

Dave Garroway

Jack Paar

I happened to be at NBC's Television Center in Hollywood during the abortive Academy Nominations program, and listening in later on the conversation among those in charge of the show, you'd actually have thought that they thought they had actually wrought a minor miracle. I heard one of the minor executives say: "Well, this'll give them something to shoot at." To which a friend of mine cracked (he shall be nameless for obvious reasons since he works for the network): "It certainly will give them something to shoot at—the producers."

What price guest stars? Jo Stafford is riding high, wide and handsome in the surveys—and rightly so—and never uses them—guest stars, that is . . . Donald O'Connor's Texaco sessions keep on getting brighter and brighter. Or is it that I can't see beyond my nose when O'Connor's on the screen because I'm mad about the boy as an entertainer . . . I wonder how much longer The U.S. Steel Hour will be able to hold on to its director, Alex Segal. The Carnegie Tech Drama School alumnus has been getting some fabulous offers from the movies; as a matter of fact, I'm only surprised that Hollywood didn't come after him long ago.

Jo Stafford

I rather think the Heinz people have latched on to a winner in Buster Crabbe's Captain Gallant of the Foreign Legion. The kids will go for it in a big way even if the adults don't, and the small fry eat a lot of soup, baked beans, ketchup, etc. . . . Understand the Wall Street Journal has taken a dim view of the Kraft Theater's prize show, "Patterns." They don't like the picture it gives of big business. Could be but I'm inclined to suspect a little more touchiness than seems necessary . . . Pearl Bailey and her tap-dancing brother, Bill, were slightly terrific on Toast of the Town. Encore, encore . . . "The Women" on TV got such a good reaction that Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer is thinking about remaking it as a picture with Lana Turner, Grace Kelly, Elizabeth Taylor and Ava Gardner. The original movie had Joan Crawford, Norma Shearer, Rosalind Russell and Paulette Goddard.

Apparently The Comedy Hour just won't take no for an answer. I was commenting only a short time ago on how little luck they had had on a couple of location shows—first from the Hollywood Bowl and later from the new Fontainebleu Hotel in Miami—and exactly the same thing happened from the Mardi Gras in New Orleans. It was another jumble, perhaps a little less so than the Hollywood and Miami turkeys but a jumble just the same.

THIS is a SPORTS WRITER?

And Marcia Henderson Has Boy Friend Named 'Phoebe,' Too

Alone on a Hollywood mountaintop these winter evenings, a shapely redhead sits reading "The Bhagavad-Gita." "The Bhagavad-Gita," in case you missed it when it came out in Sanskrit about 200 A.D., is a long Hindu philosophical poem. The redhead, in case you missed her when she came out blonde in black-and-white TV last fall, is Marcia Henderson. She plays that toothsome bundle of glossy charm, Mickey Riley, the girl sports writer whom Peter Lawford, as an advice-to-the-lovelorn columnist, pursues on NBC's Dear Phoebe.

"The last I had anything actively to do with sports or a newspaper," says Marcia, with a smile capable of dropping a male in his tracks at 20 paces, "was years ago in high school, in Williamstown, Mass. Through no fault of my own, needless to say, I became editor, publisher, reportorial staff and stencil-cutter of the Spirit, the school paper. I was also cheer leader, so I had to cover football and basketball games while my back was turned, so to speak. But that was the Spirit, as we used to say."

Twenty-four years old and single, the girl Peter Lawford stalks through the editorial rooms of the mythical Los Angeles Daily Star on Friday nights is an old hand at TV, as well as at being stalked. A graduate of New York's American Academy of Dramatic Arts, she had parts on Studio One and Pulitzer Prize Playhouse at the age of 19.

"I also did one commercial," she recalls. "It was live, for a gelatin company, and I got so rattled I was shaking more than the product. When it came time for my one line, I fluffed it, and for some reason they never asked me back."

It was a single telephone call that turned a so-so career as a free-lance TV actress into a solid success. That was a call to her Williamstown home from a New York agent with whom she left her number before leaving Manhattan in disgust. As she explains, "I went home because I wanted to talk over my career with my father." Marcia adds, "I thought perhaps I'd made a mistake and I wanted his advice on what to try next. I hadn't been there more than a couple of days when this agent called. I'd even forgotten he had my number. 'My Heavens,' he said, 'what are you doing up there? Get back to New York on the next train. They want you for "Peter Pan," as Wendy.'"

The catch was, they wanted everybody for Wendy in 1950. The Jean Arthur version of the Barrie classic was shaping up on Broadway, and the role of Wendy was as coveted as, in 1943, the part of Laurie in Oklahoma! Marcia hesitated over whether her chances justified a trip back to New York, and finally decided to gamble. She won the part, and the part won her the Critics Award, the Theater World Award and the lead in the touring company of "The Moon Is Blue." When signed last June for Phoebe, she was under contract to Universal-International, where she had made six pictures.

Writer-Producer Alex Gottlieb, creator of Dear Phoebe, got the idea for the Mickey character out of the sports section of a newspaper, naturally enough. But carrying off the role, he felt, demanded the comic talents of a woman of Lucille Ball's maturity in a girl in her twenties. After an audition trip to New York, Gottlieb despaired of finding such a creature; then, on returning to Hollywood, he learned that Universal had a kid under contract who had toured in the lead in "The Moon Is Blue."

"That's one of the most difficult 'young' parts ever written," Gottlieb said. "I figured that anyone who had played it successfully could do Mickey. I signed Marcia sight unseen on the strength of it. I had to buy up the last eight months of her picture contract just to make the pilot, and they told me I was crazy."

"He was," said Marcia thoughtfully.

"Crazy, nothing!" said Gottlieb. "Whatever it is that comedy demands —and nobody knows what that is, exactly—this girl has got it."

It might be suspected that Marcia is getting this "it" out of "The Bhagavad-Gita," were it not for the fact that cultivating the Hindu mystics is among her more recent interests. Others include a Siamese cat, Sam, which shares her house in the Hollywood hills, and not driving to work. "I don't even own a car," she says. "I guess I'm more interested in books. There's so much to learn I think a person could read for a thousand years and never know it all. To me, that's a challenge."

Hardly spoken like a sports reporter, but you never know. This gal may be bucking for Literary Editor.

So This Is Hollywood

PROGRAM OF THE WEEK

So This Is Hollywood, NBC's new Saturday night situation comedy series, should perhaps be retitled So This Is Hollywood?—with that all-expressive question mark prominently displayed. Because the program, which has every opportunity to take viewers on an authentic behind-the-scenes tour of the movie studios in its quest for laughs, chooses instead to depict Hollywood as it exists only in the minds of its script writers. As a result, the show degenerates into just another situation comedy.

Mitzi Green, a talented comedienne and night-club performer, portrays a Hollywood stunt girl. The show seldom takes advantage of her talents. She heads a cast of bright young people including Virginia Gibson, Jimmy Lydon and Gordon Jones. They're likable people, but battling weak scripts weekly doesn't help them. Just as with so many other

Hollywoodites: Peggy Knudsen, Virginia Gib-

Passport

If you like intrigue, pretty girls and Cesar Romero (not necessarily in this order) you'll probably go for the new Passport to Danger telefilm adventure series. In it, Romero stars as a diplomatic courier assigned to carry important messages to U.S. embassies throughout the world.

Romero brings to the show something that is too often lacking in other TV adventure series—a sense of humor. His eye for pretty girls is situation comedies, there is little trace of subtlety in the humor. The writers go all out for the big yocks and wind up with telegraphed slapstick. All in all, the cast doesn't get a good break.

To Danger

continually getting him entangled in situations above and beyond the call of duty. But he's on our side, of course. That automatically makes him a good guy, and the bad guys he tangles with never have a chance. Whether he's saving a fellow courier unjustly accused of selling information to the enemy, or putting the skids under a plot to assassinate the ruler of a friendly power, Cesar is always there on time.

Romero obviously doesn't take his acting chores too seriously in Passport. He has fun—and so will most viewers.—R.S.

FINE TUNING

By Ollie Crawford

Foreign Legion films introduced on TV. All it takes is a little sand and a lot of grit.

One fellow made such a bum Foreign Legion movie, it was practically a Hobo Geste.

Errol Flynn is making one where he joins the Foreign Legion to get away from women. This may not sound like the same Errol Flynn, but it is. It seems somebody asked him to join the Legion, and he thought they meant the American Legion.

In one scene, he meets the handsome leader of a camel train, sort of a Caravan Johnson.

They are supposed to travel to Bessarabia and warn her brother, Bobarabia. They are roughing it, except that they use the new modern camels, small with underslung humps. There are Arabs in front of him, whining for baksheesh, and Arabs in back of him, crying for frontsheesh.

Errol wastes a lot of time talking to the Bedouins, when he ought to Bedouin something else.

After two weeks in the desert, he figures out a way to make eight-day hourglasses, and his fortune is made.

TV Casting Directors Lament:

Mamas Are A Menace

The U.S. postman is hailed for reaching his goal despite rain, snow, sleet, etc. The "TV mama" (not to be confused with the more normal, considerate mothers of young TV actors) makes him look like an amateur.

One mama seeks jobs for her 10-year-old bleached-blonde daughter by using aliases. "She knows no casting director will speak to her if she uses her right name," says Ethel Winant, of Justice, meaningfully.

"She also uses the bribe," says Hal Loeb, of TV Playhouse. "One day, she even invited me to go over to a ritzy store and pick out a suit."

"And," adds Anita Gonzales, of Talent Associates, "once her child has been turned down for a role, she discovers where the show's rehearsing and then turns up. In front of everyone she tells the director he's made a mistake."

"Another one called the other day to say that her child was ready to start working," chimes in Elgin Hour's Joan MacDonald. "The child was six weeks old.

"It gets so you're scared to pick up the phone," adds Joan. "Many mothers put their kids on and you hear them whine, 'Is there anything for me today, Miss MacDonald?'

"One eight-year-old was so small she could walk by the receptionist without being seen. Ten mornings in a row, at 10:30 on the dot, I'd look up from my desk and there would be this kid, asking, 'Is there anything for me today, Miss MacDonald?'

"Finally, on the 10th day, the kid was embarrassed almost to tears and I was enraged. I went outside and gave that mother a piece of my mind.

"When I was working on the Montgomery program, I gave a little boy a job, only to discover that his eager mother had booked him on three shows at the same time!"

Bill Nichols, now casting Producers' Showcase, reminisces about "the carnation kid."

"Once a week, for at least a year," Bill recalls, "I'd look up and there would be this kid with a carnation saying, 'This is for you, Mr. Nichols.

Is there anything for me?' He never missed a week, thanks to his mother, who would buy the carnation and push him into my office.

"I don't really mind these women in the office," he says. "However, they have no sense of what's proper. They'll rush up to me in a restaurant and babble like idiots.

"Whenever a script calls for a child," says Nichols, "the attack usually has three phases.

"The mothers show up in droves. They must have radar or something, for they seem to know about the part before you've even made one call.

"Once you've cast the role, the next day is usually occupied with calls from mothers spreading dirt about the kid we've picked.

"Finally, the day after the show, there's a deluge of phone calls to criticize the performance of the kid."

It would seem that once a child landed a part, the mother would be placated at least until that show was on the air. But not a "TV mama."

Frank Telford, who produced and directed Du Mont's The Stranger, says the worst "Mom" problem is that so many fancy themselves directors. "At night, the mothers would go over the lines at home and redirect the whole thing. I partially licked that by forbidding the kids to take a script home. One time I couldn't get two young girl extras to look at each other and not into the camera. Seems that every time I turned my back their mothers rushed out and told them to ignore me."

Telford also has been plagued by the mothers' desire to have their youngsters look their best.

"I need a young roughneck, and I hire some kid who looks just perfect for the part. So what happens? The day of the show, the rough tough kid arrives at the studio complete with haircut and marcel, looking like a junior Liberace."

While directing a gifted young actress on a recent Television Playhouse, Gordon Duff capped her with a shabby wool tam. The script called for her to look pathetic. Just before air time, the mother switched the tam for a chic beret. Said it looked better.

The same Mr. Duff had the unhappy chore of directing a show with two young girls. Following dress rehearsal, the mother of one stormed into the other youngster's dressing room, screaming, "You've been upstaging my daughter!"

Where will it all end?

Well, last year, a teen-age lad showed up half an hour late for a rehearsal of Bonino. "I'm sorry I'm late," he told the director. "I just came from my psychiatrist."

At top of stairs, Louise Allbritton welcomes husband home in morning.

'Hello, Dear... And Goodbye'

Daily TV Chores Pose Home Problems For Newsman And Soap Opera Queen

Her days are filled with trouble—the soap-opera kind.

His mornings—he gets up at 4 A.M.—and often his evenings are devoted to troubles of another kind—today's news. Then on Sundays there's his Adventure to ruin the weekends.

So—when do they see each other?

"She" is Louise Allbritton, star of NBC's Concerning Miss Marlowe, who works from 10 A.M. till all hours.

Charles Collingwood as Morning Show newscaster, and (right) on Adventure.

"He" is her husband, Charles Collingwood, who early-birds on CBS' 7-to-9 Morning Show.

So it's "Hello—and goodbye" when Charles comes home from work. But things are much better in the Collingwood home than last year, when Charles had the 11 P.M. Chronoscope three nights a week. Then there were times when the two felt almost as if someone should introduce them all over again.

Miss Allbritton emoting in soap opera.

Off to work: a kiss for Collingwood, who is settling down for a good nap.

Martin & Lewis Pull A Fast One; Dinah Shore's Unwelcome Suitor

HOLLYWOOD . . . Dean Martin and Jerry Lewis pulled a neat coup against the opposition—Ed Sullivan's Toast of the Town—before their last Comedy Hour. They fooled Ed into wasting a powerhouse against them—by publicizing a date a week ahead of the actual show! . . . Just before a recent telecast, a stranger who kept insisting he loved her was discovered in Dinah Shore's dressing room. Guards hustled him out.

■ Here's a tale of woe. Mickey Rooney had a young lady under contract at $250 a week. Paramount wanted to test her, but the Mick said, "No." Then he turned her loose. And now the poor little girl is out in the cold—and screaming.

■ Pinky Lee's new home in Beverly Hills has an island with two palm trees smack in the middle of his swimming pool. . . . Sonja Henie has been invited by NBC to make a pilot for a series of 39 half-hour shows. "But I hate pilots," Sonja says, pouting. And with reason. Joan Crawford made two, and I believe Irene Dunne has one stashed away, and there's many a slip between the pilot and the small print of a contract. . . Speaking of pilots, Zsa Zsa Gabor wanted to change her male lead after the first film for the Cy Howard series. She asked for Gary Merrill. But she'll never get him. Not if Bette Davis sees her first.

Lucille Ball: no uranium.

■ Helen Traubel's CBS contract is so exclusive she couldn't even be a guest on This Is Your Life for Ralph Edwards. Sometimes I think the stars use the "exclusive" excuse to duck a chore. . . . When someone said to Jim Backus—before the announcement that I Married Joan was on its way out, "Well, I guess you'll get an award for supporting Joan Davis; er, you do support Joan, don't you?" Jim replied, "No, she supports me. I'm the only actor who gets a paycheck with lipstick on it."

■ Personal notes: The telegram I received from the Motion Picture Academy, in connection with my appearance as one of the hostesses on the Oscar nominations telecast, read: "You are to receive a minimum token fee of $5,000." I immediately bought a limousine, rented a beach house at Malibu and took care of a favorite uncle for life. But my telegram was meant for Jack Webb. And those are the facts ma'am . . . Said Dick Powell to my husband, after appearing on my early morning show: "We both have to get older wives who aren't so active!"

■ A pal gifted Lucy and Desi with a geiger counter and when they arrived at their Palm Springs home, the thing started jumping all over the place. But it wasn't uranium. Just Palm Springs' usual effect on geigers.

Dan Jenkins reports:

Can you guess the first requisite for the lead in any new syndicated film series? It is neither name value nor even acting ability, but this: will he or she publicize the show and endorse all the various sponsors' products? Outstanding examples: PRESTON FOSTER of Waterfront, THOMAS MITCHELL of Mayor of the Town.

FRANK WISBAR's resignation as producer-director of Fireside Theater has finally been accepted by Procter and Gamble. Show quite probably will be dropped, with P & G looking for a comic for next season . . . Bing Crosby Enterprises wants GREER GARSON for a film series, and she's interested enough to read scripts.

LIBERACE will be the piano player at the Mar. 19 White House News Photographers' Ball . . . JACK WEBB's Pete Kelly's Blues cast will include EDMOND O'BRIEN, JANET LEIGH, PEGGY LEE and ELLA FITZGERALD . . . WEBB recently wrapped up an entire Dragnet film in eight hours, what with close-ups and a Teleprompter.

ABBOTT & COSTELLO do their first Comedy Hour of the season Sunday, Mar. 13 . . . Columbia Pictures is in a deal with ABC to promote its young talent by spotting them on the U. S. Steel and Elgin dramatic shows.

VIVIAN BLAINE has completed a pilot film for a new series, It's Sunny Again . . . An upcoming Medic will be located aboard a hospital ship . . . The April A-bomb tests in Nevada may be colorcast by KTLA here and fed to the networks. KTLA has the only mobile color unit on the West Coast.

SONJA HENIE (who apparently has discovered LIBERACE) will do another "spectacular" for MAX LIEBMAN . . . A private dress rehearsal of every Bob Cummings Show is staged for GEORGE BURNS, who offers advice and comment. BURNS' company films the show.

RALPH EDWARDS had to pay all expenses out of his own pocket for that Chicago trip when he had the cab driver on This Is Your Life, and he won't travel again on that basis. Too bad; the change of scenery and the promotion value should be more than worth the cost to sponsors.

MONA FREEMAN does her first TV film, "Appointment with Destiny," for Ford Theater . . . Studio claims lots of mail pouring in squawking about Father Knows Best being dropped.
